Our Vision

For Society

To live in a world which honors its diversity, makes use of it for constructive sustainable development, and experiences the beauty within the many expressions of faith (or none).

For Belieforama

To provide an organizational mechanism by which educators and institutions can be supported towards achieving this vision, collaboratively.

At the heart of Belieframa

A photograph of two women participating in a workshop. They are kneeling on a large, ornate red and blue patterned rug. The woman on the left is wearing a red long-sleeved shirt and is pointing at a card. The woman on the right is wearing a blue patterned dress and a white headscarf, and is also pointing at a card. They are surrounded by many small, rectangular cards in various colors (red, green, blue, yellow) that are laid out on the rug in a grid-like pattern. The cards appear to have text on them, though it is not legible. The background shows a window and some furniture, suggesting an indoor setting.

Highly interactive and participatory methods that have proven effective in dealing with prejudice and discrimination.

A ground-breaking training programme to raise personal and intercultural awareness, examine issues, develop strategies and inspire action.

For both religious and non-religious people.

Academic Validation

"I want to emphasize that the production of the Handbook for Educators is a superb achievement of inter-religious, intercultural and interdisciplinary collaboration. There is no doubt that the Handbook as it stands would facilitate a great deal of learning."

"I was struck by how the Handbook's approach, at least when dealing with understanding religions, is consistent with that of the interpretive approach."

Professor Robert Jackson, Director of Religions and Education Research Unit at the University of Warwick, England; Member of drafting team for the Toledo Guiding Principles; and Researcher in the REDCo Project

Sustainability and Innovation

A critical mass of people and organizations committed to creating environments that are inclusive of the diversity of religions and beliefs.

Educators are able to address complex issues by involving a variety of social and cultural perspectives.

Organisational sustainability so that local, regional and transnational cooperation can take place in a generative way.

Belieforama as a genuine point of reference in the field of religious diversity training for educational, professional and political sectors

Belieforama?

A Community of Practice (and more) that supports individuals and organisations seeking to make a long term impact on religious diversity and belief issues through educational processes and materials that generate personal, organisational and social commitment, action and reflection.

Community of Practice

A connected group of practitioners who work and learn together

Where ideas are generated towards the common pursuit of solutions through training/gathering sessions which can be conducted online or in person.

The Belieforama CoP is an integral element to the Quality Assurance Framework.

“Excellent organisations generate increased value and levels of performance through continual and systematic innovation by harnessing the creativity of their stakeholders.” EFQM Model 2010

Quality Assurance Framework

To ensure that the objectives of 1) the Belieforama Community of Practice and 2) the Religious Diversity and Anti-Discrimination Training Programme (and its thematic training modules) are achieved to their fullest potential.

To make a long-term positive impact on religion and belief diversity issues

1

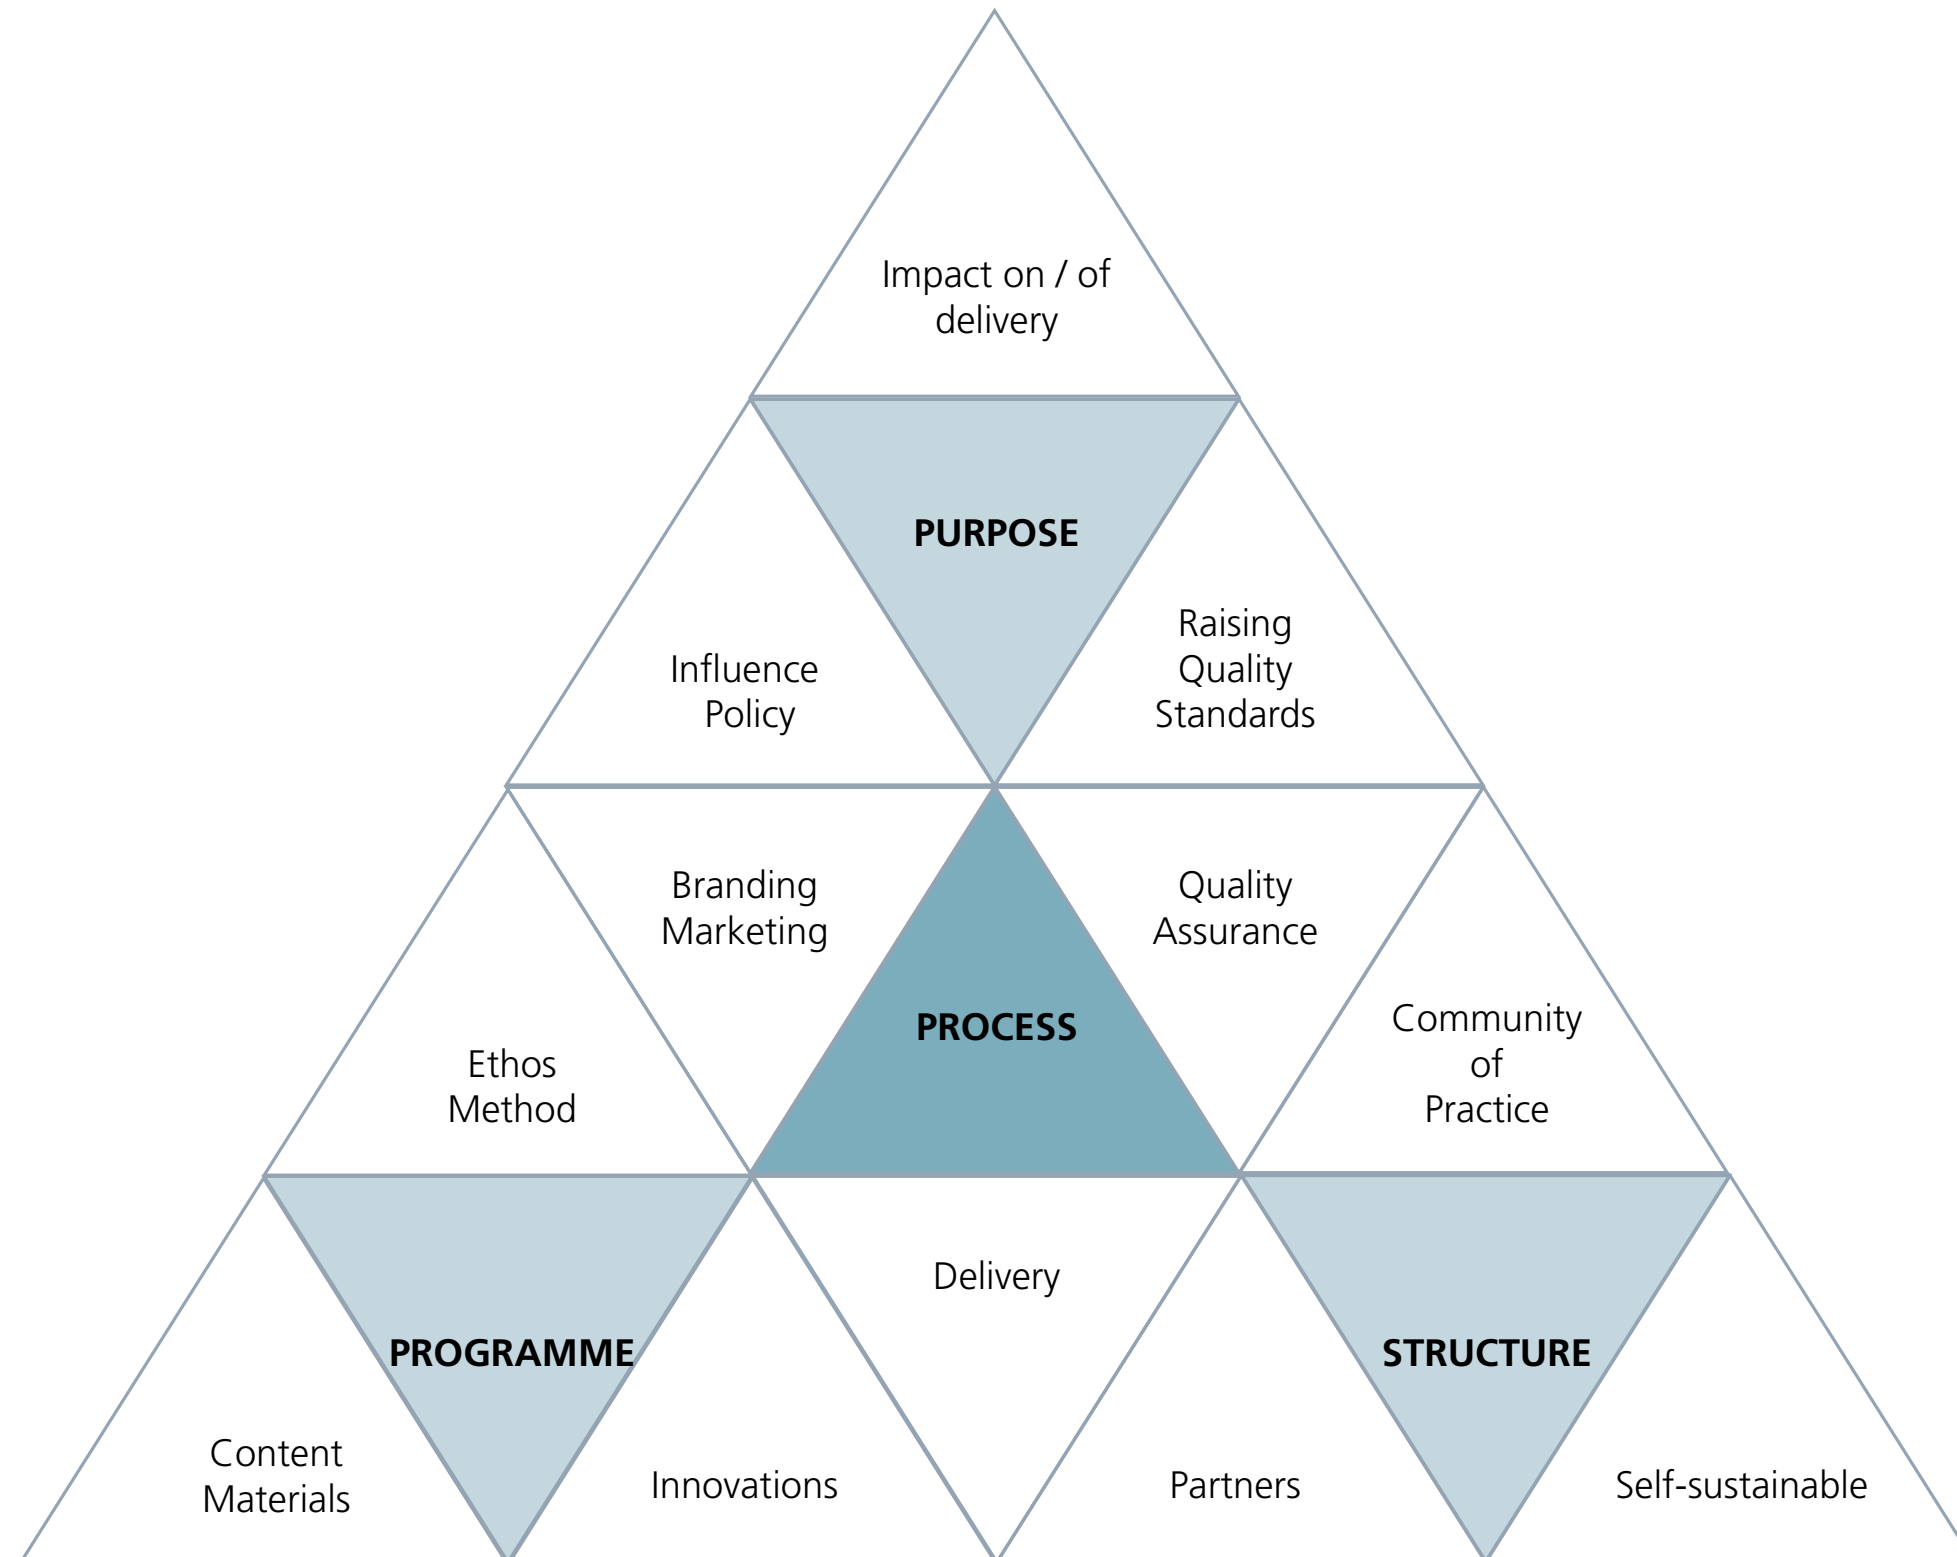

To provide educational processes and materials through co-creative collaboration

2

To inspire and generate commitment, action, and reflection at personal, organisational and social levels.

3

Quality Assurance Framework

Material Innovation

Encouraging and sharing adaptations and new developments within the CoP
